Aztec Rectangular Chandelier

One of the most surprising inspirations we've seen in a while, the Aztec Rectangular Chandelier is shaped like an inverted taco! The designer, Clarence Mallari, is staying true to his desire to work with natural elements in surprising ways by having the shade covered in row upon row of small wood beads that have been whitewashed. Because the distressed finish still allows some of the wood tones to come through, there is an uptick in warmth; and the iron frame and hardware, in a white finish, teases out the paler tones in the beads.
